NAPANEE, ONT.

A WORD IN SEASON!

With the next month the bulk of the holiday trade will be done and an intending purchaser would do well to secure their requirements in good time. I beg to inform you that my stock is complete in all lines suitable for this season of the year, including a full line of Dinner, Tea and Chamber Ware.

AND AS FULL A LINE OF

Fancy China, etc.,

as was ever displayed in this town. I also have a complete stock of Fancy and Staple Groceries.

All goods have been bought right and I am confident it will pay you to see my goods and get my prices before buying.

W. COXALL.

Timothy Seed...

We have secured a supply of the cleanest Seeds from the largest growers in the Counties. We are sure we can recommend this seed.

We carry in stock at all times a full line of our Famous Flour, and the fact that we have an increasing demand for them bespeaks their excellence and popularity. The prices are always right, and the quality too.

We have a full line of grain, all kinds of Cracked Grain, Bran, and Shorts.

When you want Salt for the table, for butter or cheese making, or for salting your pork, remember that the "Windsor" brand is the purest and the best, and while it is the cheapest it is also the saltiest.

Try one of our little Cheese. They weigh about 8lbs. each. A nice size for the family.

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly-nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

It is contrary to nature that the head should be bald. Let that be fully understood. Is it not a fact that many Ladies and Gentlemen do not wear a sufficient hair for no other reason than prejudice. Unfortunately there has been a marked increase of late in baldness and grey hair, and the result is the loss of an attractive and refined appearance. MANY LADIES have the wretched habit of crimping and curling their own hair instead of buying an article according to the style. The result is they ruin their hair and when new styles come in they are unable to follow them.

PHOR, DORENWEND, of the Dorenwend Co. Ltd., of Toronto, has for thirty years demonstrated the beautifying effects of his hair goods. Thousands of the best ladies and gentlemen of Canada and the United States are wearing his articles to-day. In many cases the manufactured article is more becoming than the natural growth, and not even an expert can detect that the hair is artificial.

The Professor carries an immense stock of Ladies' and Gents' Wigs, Toupees (half wigs), Bangs, Wavy Fronts, Switches, Braids, Etc. in every form, style and quality. All can be pleased. Cut aside False Notions and provide yourself at once with a head dress that will give charming effects. Prof. Dorenwend will be in Napanee, at Paisley House, Saturday Jan., 11th.

This opportunity should not be lost. It might be added that the professor also carries with him a full line of hair Dyes in every shade, Hair and Face Bleaches, and theatrical Wigs, Whiskers and Moustaches.
Let the date of the visit be borne in mind. Saturday, January 11th. 5b

ERNESTOWN.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE COUNTY OF LENOX.

GENTLEMEN—As there have been reports industriously circulated to the effect that I had withdrawn from the field, I deem it my duty as the Patron candidate for this riding, to publicly deny these reports, and I propose as well to submit for your consideration a few of the political principles, which we deem it our duty to advocate or oppose in the best interests of the country, and upon which we respectfully ask the electors to base their verdict in the approaching contest.
We proclaim our allegiance to our country's best interests, and not to party, that our support will be given to measures and not to men, and that our devotion will be to principles and not to partisanship. As Canada should be the happy home of all her people, without reference to race or creed, we are opposed to the introduction of sectarian or religious questions, no matter by whom introduced into our public affairs, and as full civil and religious liberty is a principle absolutely necessary to our full development as a nation, we will protect and defend the rights of our citizens as guaranteed to them by our constitution in conformity and in subjection to the general good. With regard to the exciting question at issue—"The Manitoba School Question," we adhere to the words and sentiments of the late Hon.
Sir John A. Macdonald, when he said
"there may be grievances suffered, or wrongs inflicted in religion, education, civil liberty, or in any other department, and, if the final power of decision as to what is right or what is wrong were vested in the Dominion Parliament, where is there a vestige of the use of the power or the advantage of all the machinery of Provincial Governments and Provincial Legislatures."

If the Dominion Government is to act authoritatively and request the Governor General to disallow bills which it thinks the Local Legislatures ought not to have passed, it will effectually annul and destroy the authority of Local Legislatures and the autonomy of the Provinces and thus centre
all authority in the Federal Government. I submit that a Federal Government has no right to interfere in such cases so long as the Provincial Legislature acts within the bounds of constitutional authority and on these grounds, we decidedly oppose the remedial order.

Next to the duty of upholding the constitutional rights of citizenship is that of promoting public morality both by law and by practice. The example of too many of our legislators, ministers of the crown, and public officials, is not sufficiently in accord with the dictates of public morality and has a dangerous tendency to lead the public from the path of rectitude. It is painfully visible that public life through all its stages is deeply tainted and corrupt, and the pretended punishment of a few criminals can have no deterrent effect on the governments hordes who are living and growing fat upon the wealth that belongs to the people.

We hold that in the public and official life of public servants the same principles of honesty and integrity should be adhered to as is exacted from
the people.

We believe the most extensive duty of a government is to promote the material well-being of the people.

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY

MORVEN.

Saturday, Sunday, and Monday the 4th,
5th, and 6th, of Jan. were very cold days.
The thermometer registered 24 below zero on Monday morning. On account of the cold weather small congregations attended church on Sunday.

Mr. George Gordanier, after more than two months illness, died on Monday afternoon Jan. 6th. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the whole neighborhood in the time of sorrow caused by the loss of their brother.

The roads here are excellent and wheeling is good.

The Misses Dunkley returned to Picton
on Saturday to their schools after spending their vacation with their father at Morven.
Albert Dunkley has also returned to Queen's College and Geo. Dunkley to his school on Amherst Island.

There will (D. V.) be a four days meeting held in the brick church, Morven, beginning on Tuesday Jan. 14th. Service each day at 2.30 p.m. and 7 p.m. The following ministers have very kindly consented to come and deliver addresses: Revs. F. B.
Stratton pres. of Bay of Quinte conference.
Dr. McDiarmid, D. O. Crossley, McCullough, Secombe, White and Dr. Mescham.
A general invitation is extended to all to attend these services.

HAY BAY.

Dear EXPRESS, news is scarce this week.
Election talk seems to be the order of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. John N. Hambly are at present moving in to their new dwelling.
The thrashing machine has again started out to flush up for the year.

A business meeting was held in the Presbyterian church here on Wednesday evening last. It was largely attended.

It is said we are to have a tea-meeting soon. The date I will give next issue.

Mr. and Mrs. Byard Young, of Napanee, spent Sunday last the guest of Mr. M. E.
Post, of this place.

H. V. Mooney, Esq., has been re-engaged to teach in school section No. 8, for the present year, 1896.

Quite a few hours of steady consultation
has taken place amongst some of our neighbors over a few cords of school house wood.
I think trustees should know their business.

John Rennie, Esq., was in Belleville last week. He purchased a quantity of oak lumber in Rednerville.

Mr. P. R. McCabe, of Napanee, was visiting friends on the bay last week.

One of Stirling's young ladies was visiting friends here during the past week, in the person of Miss Susie Conley. The above named lady is a sister of Mrs. Byron Young, of Napanee.

KINGSFORD.

Will Hewett, of Havelock, spent Xmas
with his parents.

Miss Mary Doyle and brother spent Sunday last at Mr. Collins, of Ernestown.

Mr. John Hewitt who was ill, is improving.

Miss Mary Doyle is spending a few days
this week week visiting friends in Deseronto.

Services at St. Judes Church at 10 a.m.
and celebration of Holy Communion.

Mr. James Wilson, and Miss Hudgins were married last week.

Miss Laura Woodcock was in town on Saturday.

Who attended the ball, do you know Tommy.

Cameron Tulloch, Esq. has returned to Sharp's Corner to resume his duties at teaching school.

Willis Hewett returned to Havelock.
W. T. Winter is on the sick list.
Don't forget the tea meeting at Empey
Hall, on the 22nd.

Alexander Hewett was elected council man for this year. A good man in the new fence has been erected around the play ground of No. 14.

WILTON.

The thermometer registered 23° below
zero on Monday morning.

Jas Davidson left last Thursday for his school near Lake Opinicon.

THE HAPPY FAMILY.

The present aggregation at Ottawa stands pilloried as the most dishonorable, corrupt and vacillating Government that ever disgraced the annals of this or any other country. Held together by what Blake fitly termed "the cohesion of plunder," they have retained office by the most unblushing corruption. Whole constituencies have been bribed by public works, and the people debauched with money pilfered from the public chest. Money has been passed out of the treasury to dishonest contractors and political wire-pullers to be returned through this channel to the credit of the Government's election fund, and the Curran bridge, the Tay canal, the Connolly-McGreevy scandals are just a few examples of the great corruption that has characterized the administration of affairs under the Tory rule. Like vultures they have preyed upon the vitals of the country, squandering our resources, impoverishing the people, and by a policy of restriction forcing our kindred to migrate to other lands.

The crisis that has overtaken this Government of incompetents is what has long been expected. Given lots of tether they have practicably hanged themselves, and it is an execution or suicide that the people of Canada can view with complacency not unmingled with joy. Ever since Mackenzie Bowell assumed the premiership dissension and strife have been in the Cabinet. While we have been regaled with fine tales of the unity of the Great Tory Government a section of the Cabinet has been endeavoring to knife the Premier for the past few months. Like the Happy Family, and they are every bit as ill assorted, they have been kept from rending one another by gorging to repletion at the public trough. Now that the people have voiced a desire that the trough shall be taken from them they have turned upon one another. One Minister, Sir Adolphe Caron, accuses another minister, Dr. Montague, of writing anonymous letters to the Governor General and Premier seeking to compass his ruin. While Montague denies that he did so, and some are inclined to credit his denial, it shows that a number of his colleagues believe him capable of just such an action, and in fact it is right in line with the windy doctor's past line of procedure. He is a good type of the unscrupulous, windy and gaseous politician that predominates in the United States. Taken on his merits no self respecting constituency would elect him as pound keeper, still he has been elevated to the position of Minister of Agriculture and is supposed to represent the interests of the farmers in Parliament. The dissensions of the cabinet culminated in half the ministers tendering their resignations to the Premier on Saturday. The malcontents are Hon. Geo. Foster, minister of Finance; Sir Chas. H. Tupper, minister of Justice; Messrs. Haggart, Ives, Montague, Dickery and Wood. The Premier has accepted their resignations and will endeavor to re-construct the cabinet. It is believed in this he will prove unsuccessful and that dissolution and an appeal to the people will be the outcome of the matter. In any event the defeat of the present Government is assured, and the general elections will usher in a Liberal Government and an era of economy and good government in this badly mismanaged Canada of ours.

It is unnecessary to speculate on the causes that lead up to the present smash-up. Bowell, as Premier, has not been a pronounced success. A section of his followers desired to take

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Mr. Editor—This age of so called development seems, in many respects, like an age of retrogression. The onward movement of civilization—if such there is to be—must be kept up by whom? It must be by the future generations. What, think you, must be the condition of these future generations when their manhood is attained, if the control of the world is to be placed in their hands? You will agree, I think, that the days of their youth must be spent under careful instructors, must be influenced by the very best examples, and that they must be given every possible opportunity for physical, intellectual and moral development so that their manhood may be marked by fair and broad-minded principles, not by narrow, selfish ones, which naturally would come from a narrow and selfish education.

It is evident that if this development is obtained, our Public Schools must be filled with efficient teachers. The facts that have given birth to these thoughts, are that some Public School Trustees are busy in forcing and keeping down the salaries of good teachers. Sensible people must surely say, that the school is the very last place where people should act miserly. It would be far more economical in the end to curtail expenses in regard to agricultural apparatus, clothing and household articles, such as steel ranges, etc. Perhaps these people will say it is their own business. Well, I say that school matters are the business of the children, not of the parents, although the latter have full control.

Let us look at things in the light of reason. If a parent by his influence dismisses a satisfactory teacher for the sake of saving a few dollars by engaging an inferior, is he not doing his children and other people's children an incalculable injury? And how much does he save? Only a few cents when it is distributed among the ratepayers of the section. He is thus bartering the success of his own child for a few cents of present gain. Such supreme selfishness is awful to think of without considering it as fact. O! deliver me from the thralldom of such selfish motives! When trustees will haggle over twenty or twenty-five dollars on the salary of a teacher whom they know to be efficient and highly satisfactory, the public spirit is very small and very much deformed. O men—if such ye be—boast not of the iniquity of your own hands! The same unfortunate teacher has spent perhaps hundreds of dollars for his own education and is now putting forth an honest effort to make his way in the world. Little wonder is it if he be over-anxious to rid himself of a most unthankful, yet most important and praise-worthy performance of duty as a Public school teacher.

It is true it may be argued that there are some inferior teachers, but do you think there is justice in striking the same scale for both classes? If the same close and conniving spirit prevails the country will soon be deprived of good teachers, for other work will be sought giving more remunerative returns. Is it any wonder that teachers are fitting themselves for law, medicine, dentistry, etc? It will soon become their sole present object to leave the teaching profession as soon as possible.

If men without children have control of public school affairs, let them think for a moment that their education may have been neglected both mentally and morally. If the present generation are lacking in culture, by all means let the next imbibe as much as possible the culture and education of the best teachers obtainable.

Again let the people give the teacher all the encouragement they can, not by complaining about something they cannot improve themselves or by find-

A good, healthy wholesomeness will make even a homely face attractive.

There are many reasons why women should take care to be healthy. One very strong reason is that beauty and illness are very seldom found together. Illness—and especially the kind peculiar to women—makes the complexion bad, the eyes dull and sunken, the manner listless and the intellect dull.

No woman in this condition can be attractive to her friends. Personal appearance counts for much, but comfort amounts to even more. What's the good of living if one cannot enjoy anything? If headaches and backaches and dragging weariness and pain accompany even slight fatigue?

If the system is constantly subjected to a debilitating drain, where is the energy to come from to make enjoyment possible?

Personal comfort and a consideration for the feelings of others are two of the incentives to an effort to secure health.

If the illness is in any way connected with the purely feminine organism (and the chances are ten to one that it is) Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure it.

Dr. Pierce has used the "Prescription" in his practice for thirty years with unbroken success. A large book (1000 pages and 300 illustrations) written by him entitled "The People's Medical Adviser" will be sent ABSOLUTELY FREE on receipt of 31 cents in one penny stamps to prepay postage and duty only. NEWBURGH LOSES A GOOD CITIZEN.

(Crowded out last week.)

On Tuesday evening last between seventy-five and a hundred of the citizens of Newburgh gathered in Percy's Hall to say farewell to Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Percy, who left on Wednesday for Mount Forest, and to present them with an address and a small token of esteem. Dr. Beaman, as chairman, in a few well chosen words explained the reason for such an assembly and called upon Mr. C. W. Thompson who read the following address:—

TO MR. AND MRS. D. E. PERCY AND FAMILY.

Dear Friends—We, some of your friends gathered here on the eve of your departure from our midst, take this opportunity to express our sincere regret at your removal but at the same time trust our loss will be your gain. We however hold you and your family in high esteem both in private and public. We have always appreciated the open frank and constant friendship which has characterized you all, and which has immeasurably strengthened the ties which bind us together as friends. We feel our village has lost sincere friends in that you were always willing to assist in advancing every good effort. The general public will long remember and revere the names of Percy and Caton which have indelibly been united under the one name Percy.

The Methodist church here has lost valuable friends and your assistance and pleasant faces will be greatly missed.

We feel that it requires heroic efforts to tear asunder the bonds and ties that have been moulded and entwined around each of you since the days of your birth to the present hour and we feel full well the tremendous strain in leaving Relatives—Friends—and the house of your nativity; but with all this we know that divine grace will be sufficient for the hour of trial.

Our best wishes go with you to your new sphere of labor, and our prayer is that our Heavenly Father will abundantly bless you and surround you with many kind friends and lead you in new avenues of usefulness.

As a parting token of our good will and friendship we ask your kind acceptance of these two chairs and vase which have been purchased with the funds of some of your many friends, in the village.

We all join in wishing you a very happy, prosperous New Year.

Signed on behalf of your friends board. The old man has stuck to the ship, however, and cabinet or no cabinet will stand by her till she runs on the rocks. The reception accorded the remedial order by the French and Irish Catholics, of Quebec, has been another disquieting influence. And Foster and Tupper perceived that they could not float into power on a wave of sectarian prejudice, as they had vainly hoped. Notwithstanding that they were pledged to remedial legislation, and that a special session of Parliament had been called to deal with the question, these vote hunting politicians saw there was nothing for it but to rid themselves of Bowell and the remedial order, or scuttle the ship.

If the worst came to the worst five years of opposition would enable them to rehabilitate themselves, as it had their late leader, Sir John Macdonald, once before. Their actions will go down in the archives of Canadian history as one of the basest acts of political treachery on record. We have nothing but respect for the old spartan, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who to redeem
his pledge would have introduced remedial legislation, despite the consequence. Like the famous Jimmie Bludsoe, he will stand by the ship,
and "hold her nozzle against the bank till the last soul gets a shore." It may be misguided zeal, but it shows that the old man is possessed of honor, and it is a credit to him that after so long an association with such a gang he has been able to retain it. But what are we to think of the cowardly mariners, who like rats, deserted the leaky old vessel on the first approach of the storm. The deluge that Sir John Macdonald prophesied is upon them and threatens to engulf them.

Sir Charles, the elder, and head, and we might say "neck" and "cheek"
of the Tupper dynasty is at present in Canada looking after the interests of the family. The defeat of the Government means the loss of his fat position
as High Commissioner to England, together with its emoluments. He is even spoken of for the Premiership, but the electorate of Canada, already surfeted with the other bumptious members of this interesting family, will sicken at the thought of the Great Romancer and Stretcher.

In these disquieting times the people of the Dominion turn to Sir Wilfred Laurier as the hope of Canada. In him they have a statesman, not a politician, a man of principle, not a traitor. The man who assumes the reins of Government after the next general election will not have a bed of roses, but we believe that Mr. Laurier, surrounded as he is by some of the ablest men in Canadian public life to day, is equal to the task.

The Globe in referring to the demands put forth by THE EXPRESS and Mr. Allan Pringle for a full and detailed report from the Fishery Overseer of this district says it looks now as if the report which the public demand will have to be secured through a question in Parliament.

to exaggerated complaints from chilren, but by urging them on to obedience and study. —From what I can learn from all classes of people the greatest success is attained by the pupil that is not allowed by its parents to tell tales out of school, and the one who,
if he goes home complaining bitterly of treatment from the teacher, quite likely exaggerated, gets another whipping for his misbehavior. It is better to foster a more manly ambition in the youthful minds of boys and girls, and it will also have a great tendency to cause them to apply themselves more studiously to their work. It is well to avoid gossip, at all times, es-

Short speeches were made by Rev. Mc-

Thomson, I. Dunwoodie, F. Drewry, P.
D. Shorey, Dr. Duff, J. Osborne, A. C.
Grange, E. McCulloch, and J. W. Courney. The combined result of the speeches showed that Mr. Percy has always taken a live interest in the affairs of the village and has always done his duty faithfully and well—as a business man his dealings were always straightforward and honorable—as secretary of the school board the members of the board and the teaching staff all give him the highest praise for his efficiency and geniality—as a church official he was ever present when duty called. In him the Methodist church loses a man upon whom many responsibilities have been cast and never has the confidence in him been misplaced—as a private citizen he had no enemies; the constancy of a genial disposition made friends for him without number.
He was always the first to head a subscription list for the boys for athletic sports and games—the first to welcome new comers to the village and make them feel at home.
The home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy was always open to social entertainment.

The ladies present claimed to be able to show quite as many good qualities in Mrs.
Percy if their modesty had not prevented the speech. Suffice it to say that no one can find an unkind word to say of Mrs.
Percy and soon in Mount Forest she will be beloved by all who know her as she is by those she leaves behind.

Mr. Percy, wife and children have the good wishes of all who know them.

In The Beginning

Of a new year, when the winter season of close confinement is only half gone, many find that their health begins to break down, that the least exposure threatens sickness. It is then as well as at all other times, and with people even in good health, that the following facts should be remembered, namely: that Hood's Sarsaparilla leads everything in the way of medicines; that it accomplishes the greatest cures in the world; has the largest sale in the world, and requires the largest building in the world devoted exclusively to the preparation of the proprietary medicine.
Does not this conclusively prove, if you are sick, that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the medicine for you to take?

Rheumatism of 20 years' standing radically cured by Scott's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Sarah Browning, an estimable resident of the Ambitious City, was for twenty years a sufferer from acute rheumatism, and her restoration to health is so remarkable that we present the case for the benefit of our readers, many of whom are doubtless sufferers from this painful complaint which arises from blood poison. Mrs. Browning says: "I used only one bottle of Scott's Sarsaparilla and received such benefit that I continued taking only at intervals for two months.
That is seven months ago, and the pain
has not returned. I had spent a fortune in various "treatments" and was told by one medical man that a cure was impossible as I had suffered so long."

Scott's Sarsaparilla cures by making and keeping the blood pure. It increases flesh by digesting flesh-forming foods.
It is the most successful medicine in the world to-day, for dyspepsia, nervous troubles, rheumatism, sciauca, syphilitic afflictions, pimples and all diseases originating in a foul condition of the blood. Dose from one half to one teaspoonful.

LIQUID AIR.

Dr. Linde's Process for Making it on a Commercial Basis.

It is only about a year since the scientific world was surprised and delighted with Professor Dewar's brilliant series of experiments with liquid air, liquid oxygen, and liquid hydrogen and physicists have just about had time enough to recover from their surprise at these discoveries. Now the announcement comes that Dr. Linde, the inventor of the refrigerating system bearing his name, has devised an apparatus hardly more complicated than a refrigerating machine, whereby liquid air can be produced on a commercial scale. He dispenses with the carbonic acid and ethylene, which were required in the earlier processes, and liquefies the air by a cycle of compressions, expansions and coolings which are as simple as to remove the production of this particular material from the laboratory to the factory. But this is only part of the remarkable mechanical achievements which have just been announced. The production of liquid air is but a step toward the preparation on a large scale of fairly pure oxygen. The great source of oxygen is the air, but to separate the oxygen and nitrogen in the air has heretofore required a complicated process. Dr. Linde starts, however, with the fact that when liquid air is evaporated the nitrogen is given off first, and then the oxygen, so to secure oxygen he merely lets his liquid air evaporate and collects only the oxygen. The cost of producing in this way a gas containing 70 per cent. of oxygen is estimated to be about 28 cents per 1000 cubic feet, if the machinery works under the most favorable conditions.

In a Valuable Territory—Navigable in Large Stretches for Steamboats and Rafts
a Depth of Forty Feet—May Be the Nile
of the North.

Prof. R. Bell of the Geological Survey, was interviewed by a reporter concerning the extensive exploration from which he has just returned, and more particularly in regard to the discovery of a great river almost due north of Ottawa.

"The government was desirous of filling up the great blank spaces on the map to the south and southeast of James Bay, and directed me to proceed with the work," he said. "This space represents the only large unexplored area in the southern or valuable part of the Dominion.

"The existence of this blank up to this year was rather a reflection on our geographical enterprise. This area is larger than the settled portions of either Ontario or Quebec and considerably larger than the State of New York. I found that it all belongs to the drainage area of a single river, which was consequently very large in a country where the rainfall is so copious.

"This river turns out to be one of the leading geographical features of the Dominion, and it seems almost incredible that it should have remained unknown till now. One reason for this is the fact that it is not used for transportation by the Hudson Bay Company. The great tract of country which it drains is valuable for agriculture, being mostly south of England in latitude, and having a nearly level surface, with good soil and very little rock.

"Speaking generally, my route was as direct as possible from Ottawa city to the southeastern extremity of James Bay, and it was the first time that such a journey has been attempted. With two large birch bark canoes, manned by crews of strong Indians, I ascended the Gatineau River, which enters the Ottawa near Ottawa, and some of its branches, till I reached the head waters of the Ottawa. The height of land between the basin of the St. Lawrence and that of Hudson Bay passes close to Grand Lake, on the upper Ottawa. Crossing this great divide by waterways, from

FARMERS' INSTITUTES.

The Ladies of the Ottawa Cooking School to Deliver Addresses on the Culinary Art.

Miss Bessie Livingston, superintendent Ottawa Cooking School,* and her assistant, Miss Miller, have consented to address Farmers' Institute meetings on the following subjects, any time between the 1st of December, 1895, and the 1st of April, 1896:

1. "The food value of milk and its Derivations." 40 minutes.
2. "Cooking of milk, cheese and eggs; time 50 minutes"
3. "A practical lesson on invalid cookery"; 40 minutes.
4. "Diet for children"; 40 minutes.
5. "Cereal food and breakfast dishes"; 50 minutes.
6. "The cookery of vegetables"; 20 minutes.
7. "Classes and combinations of food"; 20 minutes

8. "Hot supper dishes"; 45 minutes.
Papers will be read on some of the following subjects:

1. "The farm kitchen" (with discussion 20 minutes.)
2. "The five food principles and the purposes they serve in the body"; 15 minutes.

DEMONSTRATION LECTURES

1. "The dietetic value of milk and cheese," with illustrations of cooking them; 30 minutes.
2. "The medicinal properties of fruits and dainty ways of serving them"; 30 minutes.

3. "Starchy foods"; examples, puddings and breakfast dishes; 40 minutes.

5. "The school childrens' lunch basket"; 30 minutes.
- Food will be prepared and cooked before the audience and served at close of lecture.

These ladies are highly recommended by Prof. Robertson and Dr. James Mills, president of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont. Institute officers who wish to secure the services of these ladies, should correspond at once with E. W. Hillson, superintendent of Farmers' Institutes, Guelph, Ont.

STUDY OF THE MOON

Peculiarities Noted in Its Appearance at Different Seasons.

To the casual observer the motions of the moon appear to be exceedingly whimsical and irregular. If its place in the sky is watched it will be found that it is first north and then south of the sun's path, and that it is sometimes east and sometimes west of that luminary. The last two motions are steady and regular, from east to west, carrying the moon in its endless swing around the heavens, starting at new moon near the sun and progressing until full moon the whole visible portion of the sky separates the two bodies. After this there are two weeks in which the moon still appears to move backward, approaching the sun from the other side, then, again apparently all of a sudden, it passes the sun, and we behold a "new moon."

The north and south motions of the moon are entirely different. While performing its endless journey from west to east there are two special periods in which it either moves far northward or takes up its position low down in the south. In spring the first motion is north, but afterward the general motion is reversed. In December you will note that the full moon occurs at the most northerly point in her course, and in June at the most southerly. This is why we have most light from the full moon of winter and least from that of summer. Observations on these various movements indicate to us the path which the moon moves about the earth, and also shows us that that body in different parts of its orbit is at varying distances from the earth.

This indicates that the moon's path is not a circle, but an ellipse, having the earth in one of its foci. The moon being governed directly and held in position by the attraction of the earth, holds its primary movements in a path around our globe, but the attractive energy of the sun, and of the giant planets, perhaps, in a lesser degree, produces motions in the moon which may be summarized briefly as a combination of the six following movements: (1) its revolution about the earth; (2) its revolution with the earth about the sun; (3) the vibrating eccentricity of its orbit; (4) the slow direct rotation in the "line of apses"; (5) the retrograde rotation in the line of nodes, and (6) its rotation on its axis.

It would be proper to enlarge this "note" so as to give a full explanation of the causes of each of the above mentioned movements, but as each would require the use of scores of diagrams and technical phrases, such a feat cannot be attempted, as it would take up the whole space allotted to this department.—St. Louis Republic.

Sending Dirty Eggs to Market.

To send dirty eggs to market impairs their value and is an indication of slovenliness on the part of the sender. If the eggs come dirty from the nest, they should be cleaned before sending to market. An easy and convenient method of doing this is to place the eggs in any handy dish and pour warm water over them, increasing the heat up to about blood heat. This will dissolve any dirt that may be on the egg without rubbing. Lay a linen cloth folded over several times on a table near the dish, and as the eggs become clean take them out of the water and place them on the cloth. The water will quickly drain from them and the cloth will absorb it, obviating the possibility of stain on the underside of the eggshell. The eggs being hot will dry of themselves and the shell will naturally assume that bright, fresh appearance seen in the new-laid egg. Badly stained eggs that will not yield readily to the above process may be dipped in vinegar for a minute, when they will be as easily cleaned as the others.

New Mining Process.

In the great west, miners often find rivers that have their beds filled with enormous deposits of peculiar black sand. This sand contains large quantities of gold dust, which, however, it is extremely difficult to separate from the sand, owing to the fact that the sand has very much the same specific gravity as gold, and settles in about the same way as the precious metal. This sand contains iron, and it has been found profitable to a limited extent, to have the deposits melted; but this is not a very paying business; therefore a new process has been tried with marked success. By means of iron magnets the iron particles are drawn away from the gold, leaving this substance quite clear. After passing through the apparatus devised for this purpose, it is found that forty pounds of sand yield one ton of crude sand and ore, worth about $400 a ton. If the machine that is now being tested does all that is claimed for it, it will be of very great value, as it costs but about $1,000 for a working plant capable of handling an enormous amount of sand per day.—St. Paul Dispatch.

canoes to pass. But it soon entered a good sized lake, and after that tributaries fell in from east and west till it became a big river.

"An assistant of mine in 1887 had surveyed a portion of this stream, and had heard some vague accounts of a great river to the north, of which this was one of the heads. I began my instrumental survey where my assistant had left off and carried it on all the way to the mouth and thence along the sea above, to Rupert's House, in order to tie it on to a fixed point at the other end.

"Our river had now become larger than the upper Ottawa. Below this several large tributaries join it from the west. This part of the stream has an average depth of 40 feet, and it is seldom interrupted by falls or rapids, so that long stretches of it would be navigable by steamboats.

"In all this part of the river there is only one human inhabitant—a lone Indian who came over from the Abitibi country a few years ago and took possession of a hunting ground the size of several ordinary counties. I had frequently fallen in with this Indian when at Grand Lake, whither he had come to trade his furs to the agent of the Hudson Bay Company, and he acted as guide as far as he knew the country.

"About half way between the watershed and the mouth our river falls into the west end of a lake called Mattakami, which lies at right angles to the course of the river. A large branch from the east, called the Wawanipi, falls into the east end of this lake, and the united waters discharge by a great river flowing out about the middle of its north side.

"My Indian guide turned back from this lake, as he had never traveled further. He told me he had heard from other Indians that the big river did not fall into Rupert Bay, which, however, did not prove correct.

"On Mattakami Lake we found an old one-eyed Indian who had only this summer come from the Abitibi country, and could give us no information about the great river we were to descend to the sea. We were therefore obliged to depend upon ourselves, and we succeeded in reaching James Bay in safety, thanks to the skill of my Indians.

"With the exception of some small tracts the whole country is covered with the original forest. Game was unaccountably scarce, but fish were plentiful in all the lakes and streams. On reaching Rupert's House we crossed the bay in a schooner of the Hudson Bay Company to Moose Factory, and thence ascended the western branch of the Moose River to the Canadian Pacific Railway."

CHAPTER XXXV.

Vane went home after his proposal to Lady Florence; and to bed; and he did not get up again for two months.

The doctors called it by a scientific name in six syllables, and said that the trouble had arisen from a cold brought about by exposure to the wet; and everybody remarked that here was another instance of the truth that a common cold was the beginning of most serious illness.

For some time it was a question whether he would recover. The fever was obstinate, and the doctors said the patient showed a lack of nerve power; there was no evidence of a desire on his part to second their efforts at pulling him through.

To Mr. Senley Tyers, who proved a staunch friend, and was to be found for some portion of each day by his friend's bedside, one eminent doctor remarked: "I am inclined to think that Mr. Tempest has something on his mind, some trouble or annoyance upon which he has been dwelling; there is a morbid condition which militates against his recovery and defies the usual treatment. Physically, he is a splendid specimen, splendid; but the body, you see, Mr. Tyers, is very much, too much, under the influence of the mind, and our patient's mind has suffered some great disturbance, I am convinced. Are you aware of any trouble that would have been likely to affect him seriously?"

And Senley Tyers had put on a look of careful consideration before he had replied:

"No-o, no, certainly not. If there had been, I must have known it. There were money troubles. Most young men of his position—"

The eminent one shook his head and smiled.

"The anxiety was not a financial one, I should say," he remarked. "Do you know of anything else?"

"No," replied Senley Tyers.

he said. "He needs a loving and watchful cure—such care as only a wife can give. But there; we need not talk of him as if he were a confirmed invalid. Vane will soon be the old Vane again, and then—"

He paused significantly and left her. "You must get well as soon as you can, my dear fellow," he said to Vane, half an hour later; "you've got a big business in hand, you know."

Vane looked at him with listless interrogation.

"Big business?" "Yes. You don't call matrimony a small one, do you?" said Senley Tyers, lightly.

Vane's face flushed, and he looked down; and, though he made no response, Senley Tyers' speech had its effect, and almost the first words Vane said when Lady Florence and he met were:

"When is our wedding to be, Florence?"

"It shall be when you please, Vane," she answered, her hand trembling in his, her eyes cast down for a moment, then raised with a passionate devotion in them.

"Then I'll take the usual invalid's advantage and say 'Soon,' he said, lifting her hand to his lips. But for this wretched illness we should have been man and wife before this. If you'll promise to take me—what remains of me, that is!—and he glanced down at his thin hands with a laugh—"next month—say the end of February—I shall have something to get well for. I'll talk about it to your father when he comes this afternoon, if you'll say 'Yes.'"

A glad light brightened her face, and she let her head fall lightly upon his shoulder and drew his arm round her neck.

"I would marry you to-morrow if you'd promise to get well by that time," she said, with a faint laugh.

Lord Warlock, when he came, readily assented to the date proposed.

This was a distant cousin who had been engaged for best man. The landlord bowed.

"Yes, sir. His lordship, the earl, told me to expect him. Everything is ready, sir."

"Very good," said Vane. "Can you let me have a horse to ride over to the Grange? How far is it, by the way?" "Near upon four miles, sir," replied the man. "Oh, yes, sir, I've a very good horse, and I think it will be fine, your honor."

"It looks bright enough," said Vane, preparing to go into his breakfast.

"Yes, sir; it's too clear over the Witches' Caldron for rain."

Vane started and stood still. "What—what place did you say?" he asked, his back to the obsequious landlord.

"The Witches' Caldron, your honor."

Vane turned slowly, his lips compressed, a shadow on his face. Beyond the fact that the Grange was near Runnacre, and, like the Witches' Caldron, in Cornwall, he knew nothing of his whereabouts.

"How near is it?" he asked.

"A matter of ten miles, your honor," replied the landlord. "It's a main pretty place, but wild like. It's close to the sea. You can almost see it from your window, your honor."

Vane stood silent and motionless.

"In which direction does it lie?" he asked, after a long pause.

The landlord pointed to the east.

"Right in a line with my forefinger," he said. "There's the Grange, as you might say, inland to the left; and there's the Witches' Caldron on the coast, a bit to the right. It isn't a sight out of your honor's way, if so be as your honor was n't pressed for time and 'ud care to see one of the roughest spots we've got."

Vane shook his head.

"No; I have no time," he said. He went in and tried to eat his breakfast but failed. Something seemed to be drawing him to the place at which the misery of his life had commenced. He went out and ordered the horse round, leaped into the saddle, and rode in the direction of the Grange, as if fearful that if he hesitated or slackened rein he should yield to the temptation that beset him to gallop straight for the Caldron.

It was the day before his marriage with one of the loveliest of the wealthiest women in England. All his thoughts ought to be of her, and yet—and yet. He pulled up and looked around. In his absence of mind, his mental agitation, he had lost the thread of the direction to the Grange which the landlord had most carefully given him. He looked from side to side, then rode on again slowly, hoping to come upon a landmark.

escape him, mingled with his almost overwhelming joy at her presence, and he drew near to her slowly, hesitatingly.

"How—how did you come here?" he asked, breathlessly. "How is it that I find you here alone? Where have you been hiding—where?"

He put his hand to his head, as if half stunned by the suddenness of his discovery.

"Hiding?" She echoed the word with faint wonder, and her lips trembled. "Hiding?"

"Yes," he exclaimed. "You know—You must know—that I have been searching for you all these weary months."

"You have been searching for me?" Her brows grew straight with bewilderment, her hand gripped the skirt of her habit.

"You know—you know that I have," he repeated, with painful agitation. "Oh, Nora, Nora! how could you be so heartless? How could you leave me without a word of explanation? When we parted that night—" He looked at her with deep reproach. "Have you forgotten that night—how happy you had made me, how you had promised to be my wife?"

She uttered a faint cry, and, shrinking from his vehemence, sank on to the rock on which she had been sitting when he descended to the beach.

"You promised to be my wife. You deceived me—Yes I know—I understand," he went on hurriedly, for she had opened her trembling lips as if to speak. "I know why you made that promise; I can understand that the excitement of the moment and—and my urging you compelled you to say what was not true. I know all that now; but why did you leave me without a word? Was it kind—was it, Nora? I thought I knew you. I would not have left you like that." She gazed at him as he stood before her, her face as white as his own, his eyes seeking hers, with a commingling of reproach and infinite tenderness. "If you had waited till the morning and told me that—that—the reason why you could not marry me, do you think I would have held you to your promise—that I would not have released you? You knew—you must have known—how dearly I loved you."

She spoke at last.

"You—you loved me?"

He stared at her.

"You know I loved you—I told you so! Do you think I—I lied to you? Do you think I was trying to deceive you? Oh, Nora, Nora! you have been very cruel to me, my girl."

"Cruel to you?"

She echoed the words as if she failed to grasp their meaning.

"Yes," he said, with deep emphasis—"most cruel! Why did you not trust me? You trusted—you confided in Senley Tyers. Why did you not tell me what you told him? Did you think I should be so mean as to force you to marry me—that I wouldn't have been your friend still? God forgive you and water to reach you! You know why?"

She could not help the "Why?" that rose to her lips.

"Why?" He laughed again. "Because I loved you, because I should have come to you with the hope of winning your love. Yes, if you had sent to me—even if you had not—I should have come to you and—I would have made you love me!"

In the tempest of love's passion that throbbed and shook him he forgot everything—forgot that his bride of the morrow was even now awaiting him.

She put her hands up to her eyes with a faint cry, almost a moan, and yet a moan not wholly of sorrow. There was another sound in it that went straight to his heart.

"Nora," he said, and let his hand fall on her arm. "Is there more mystery, more confusion and misunderstanding? Take your hands away from your eyes, that I may see them and read the truth."

He drew her hands away from her face and looked straight into her eyes.

"Nora—oh, my darling! what shall I say? How can I show you how dearly I love you—how badly I want you? Why did you deceive me that night at Lulb? Why did you pretend that you loved me, when all the while you were anxious to escape from me—when you preferred to face the world alone rather than marry me?"

The tears began to well into her eyes, her hands writhed together.

"Why did you do it? Did you hate me so much, dislike me so much, that you could not bring yourself to marry me?" "No! no! no!"

The words seemed to force themselves through her lips and against her will. "No?" he echoed, his hand tightening on her arm.

"Oh, no, no! You know!" she moaned. "Oh, Vane, Vane! you are cruel—cruel! You know that I loved you, that I loved you too well to let you ruin yourself by marrying such a one as I was!"

He doubted the evidence of his ears and eyes, for, indeed, her face was as eloquent of the truth as her few broken words.

"Nora," he exclaimed, breathing hard.

"I loved you," she whispered, simply, humbly. "And I would not let you share my disgrace—for I had disgraced myself. Everybody would have shrunk from you as well as me, if you had married me. I was not fit to be your wife after—after what I had done. I was a leper—"

He caught her in his arms and drew her up to his breast.

"Nora, what is it you are saying? Do you know what you are saying? You—you loved me—loved me all the time! And it was because you thought that you were not fit—Oh! my sweet, innocent child, you not fit to marry me!" He laughed, and held her at arm's length, devouring her face with his hungry eyes. "Why, how did such wild nonsense get into your head? How could it have done so?"

Panting, she rested in his arms, her face upturned to him with a strange look in her lovely eyes, a look of one who wanders blindly out of the darkness of a great sorrow into the dazzling light of a greater joy.

He kissed her, kissed her lips, her hair, the wonderful eyes.

"My love!" he murmured. "Is it only a dream? Can it be true that you and I are together again, Nora? That—that you love me, actually loved me that night—"

There was silence for a spell. Then, blushing, she drew away from him and sank on to the rock again, and he flung himself at her feet and held her tightly, as if he still feared that she might vanish.

"Now—now tell me all, everything," he said. "Wait. Just say once more. I love you, Vane, that I may get a firm grip of it. You see, I am not sure that I haven't gone mad, and that it isn't all a delusion."

She looked down at him, with love radiating from her whole face.

"I—love—you, Vane," she murmured, dutifully.

"And now, to begin with," he urged, "try and imagine how impatient I am to hear your story. Don't forget anything. And you are Reuben Vale's daughter? Why, we are a sort of cousins," he laughed. "And you live

"You—you have the note?" she said, her dark brows straight. "Show it to me."

He drew out his pocket-book and took out the letter.

"There it is, dearest. And, I say, how nicely you write. I couldn't write such a good flat to save my life."

She took the paper in her hand and gazed at it as if she could not believe her eyes, then she turned her face to him with a troubled frown.

"I did not write this," she said.

AUTOMATIC MILKER.

A MACHINE INVENTED IN SCOTLAND
HIGHLY SPOKEN OF.

Milkmaids Have Now a Dangerous Rival

—The New Invention Said to be the Most Successful Machine in the Market—Absolute Cleanliness Secured.

Milkmaids have a dangerous rival. A man has built a milking machine. From time immemorial the cow has swished her tail over the milk pail, and been mistress to a certain extent of all she contained. But hereafter she will have to accommodate herself to a labor-saving device which will pay little regard to her feelings in the matter.

This milking machine has been invented in Scotland. It is said to work perfectly. It is known as the "Thistle," and an English farm paper says of it:

"The most successful milking machine yet invented was recently shown at the Darlington Fair, where it attracted more attention than any other novelty on exhibition. The machine has been so thoroughly tested by experts that it is now considered to be almost perfect, and it has given so much satisfaction as to warrant the erection of large works for the manufacture of the machinery. Its construction is based on the principle of suction produced by vacuum in a teat cup, which, pressed against the teat of a cow, extracts the milk, which is carried off to a receiving pail. While the teat is drained of its milk, air enters the cup, allowing the former pressure to relax, and the teat is again filled with milk from the udder. Vacuum is once more created in the teat cup, which again collapses, pressing out the milk into the tube, and it then passes to be received as before. The exhaustion is, of course, effected by means of an air pump, which can be worked by the motive power most convenient.

"The teat cup is by far the most important part of the machine. Great difficulty was experienced in manufacturing the cup on account of the complications of movement required in imitating the calf's lips and tongue, special machinery having to be manufactured for this alone. These teat cups are about the size of an ordinary wine glass, are made of flexible india-rubber and are adapted to any cow. The four cups join at the bottom, with a tube attached long enough to carry the milk to the glass cylinder or trap on top of the pail. Another tube connects this glass trap with the exhaust pipe running overhead. When the cups are placed on the teats and the exclusion of air is complete the milk begins to flow, not in a continuous stream, but intermittently, streaming into the glass receiver with each respiration of the pulsometer, just as it would do when the hand closes on the teat in the act of milking, the momentary interval between each stroke being exactly the same.

"By aid of the glass receiver the attendant is enabled to see when the milk ceases to flow, and then removes the cups at once. Should the suction go on, however, after the milk ceases to flow, no injury will be done. This has been fully borne out by practical experiment. It is also worthy of note that the milk 'froths' up in the pail just the same as if done by hand. The friction is so gentle that the cows seem to enjoy being milked by it.

"A hand machine for four cows, with a woman and a lad, is capable of milking thirty cows in less time than four women can do it. Larger machines are being fitted to milk large numbers at a time.

"The most obvious advantage to be derived from a milking machine lies in the fact that a large number of cows can be milked with the employment of but few hands. This is a matter of greater importance in dairying than in most other lines where machinery is sought to be introduced, because, while in other lines it may cheapen production, in dairying the number of cows that can be kept is limited by the number of hands that can be kept busy on the farm outside of the milking hour.

"An additional advantage is the absolute cleanliness that is possible with a properly constructed machine, it being admitted that even the most strictly clean and careful hand milkers cannot entirely keep impurities from the milk."

The latest sleeve is moulded to the arm from the wrist to two inches above the elbow, and the part at the top is full, short and drooping.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of guess the misery you have caused me," she looked at him as if painfully trying to follow and understand him. "For months I have been searching for you. Day and night, with scarcely any rest. I have been looking for you. For months I never lay down to sleep but I saw you lying dead or—" He shuddered. "But you know—you must know how, loving you as I did, I must have suffered." He drew his hand across his brow. "But that's all over," he said, looking at her. "You—you are well, happy? I—I am glad of that. Will you tell me—you won't refuse to tell me—where you have been hiding—how you managed to keep out of the way? Where! where have not looked for you, Nora?"

She leaned her head on her hand, as if too confused and bewildered to grasp his meaning for a moment or two, then she looked up at him.

"You did not know where I was first, but—but later you did."

"No!" he exclaimed, vehemently. "Not from the time you ran away from me until this moment have I ever heard where you have been. I do not know it now."

She half rose, then sank down again as if too agitated to stand.

"You knew I was at Vale Hall," she said, in a low voice of reproach, as she struck him.

"You—at Vale Hall? No! Why—why should you be there? How should I know it?"

"They wrote, they told you—they must have told you," she said.

He stared at her.

"They—who? I don't understand. What does this mean? You at Vale Hall? Why did you go there? It is the last place, the very last place in the whole world I should have thought of looking for you."

She trembled and uttered a low moan of bewilderment.

"You knew that—that I am its mistress," she faltered, her eyes on his; "that—that they found I was Reuben Vale's daughter."

He said not a word, but signed to her to go on.

"They—the lawyers—wrote and told you that they had found me; that it was I who had stepped in between you and the estates and the wretched money."

"Merciful Heaven!" he breathed.

"Nora, I never read those papers!" She started and held her breath.

"I knew that my uncle's daughter had been found, that all had been left to her; but I took no interest in her. I never read the papers or saw your name—the name of Nora Trevanion. I yielded her calm, not knowing or caring who she was or anything about her history. Do you know why? It was because my heart was too full of misery for the loss of you for me to care about anything else."

She trembled, and pressed her hand against the wet rock to steady herself. She was a woman, and could not be deceived. There was love, passionate love, in his voice, in his eyes.

"You never knew?" she faltered.

"Never!" he said. "I did not guess—" He stopped and uttered an exclamation, as the portrait in the lumber room, the strange manner in which Mrs. Trevanion had spoken to him of Reuben Vale, rose in his memory. "I see it all now! I remember the portrait—it was your mother."

"Yes," she breathed.

He paced up and down the beach, his head upon his breast, trying to unravel the tangled skein; then he stopped in front of her.

"But why did you not, you yourself, write and tell me—send for me?"

Her head drooped, and she turned her face from him.

"I—I thought you knew from the papers they sent you, and—and that you did not want to see me, did not want to come," she murmured.

He stared down at her, then broke into a wild laugh.

"Not care to come, Nora! Look me in the face and say that. Not care to come, when I had been searching for you day and night, when I would have given the whole world to have seen you, if only for a moment, long enough to learn from your own lips that you were safe and happy."

He drew nearer to her, and resting one foot on the rock, bent over her.

"Nora, I would have come to you if you had been at the other end of the know, you remember I was alone there. And who was Mrs. Trevanion?"

"My mother's sister," she said.

"Yes, yes, I see. And Reuben Vale did not know who you were, of course. But you'll have to tell me all about that later on. What I want to know is, where you fled to that night, and—and—oh, Nora, if you could guess what I've gone through! But never mind. That's all over and past. I've got you again, and I'll take care I don't lose you," and he drew her down to him and held her tightly for a moment. "Now, then, where did you go that night?"

"I—I don't know," she said. "Only to Kilif you had but written to me two days—after you met with these people, and told me you were safe, how much less I should have suffered! But never mind, never mind. What is their name?"

Her face had grown pale again, and troubled with doubt and perplexity.

"I—I wrote? I did not write!" she faltered.

He looked up at her, smiling.

"Have you forgotten it, Nora?" He laughed a short, happy laugh. "Why, my dear child, I have the note, the precious little note, in my pocket at this moment. I say precious, though it hurt as well as comforted me, for it was hard to be told that you could be hiding from me and yet—happy."

Nervous Prostration

It is now a well established fact in medical science that nervousness is due to impure blood. Therefore the true way to cure nervousness is by purifying and enriching the blood. The great blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read this letter:

"For the last two years I have been a great sufferer with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart. I was weak in my limbs and had smothered sensations. At last my physician advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla which I did, and I am happy to say that I am now strong and well. I am still using Hood's Sarsaparilla and would not be without it. I recommend it to all who are suffering with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart." Mrs. DAITON, 86 Alice St., Toronto, Ontario. Get Hood's, because

Hood's Sarsaparilla

True Blood Purifier
Prominently in the public eye today. It is not a hat we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story.

Hood's Pills set harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Runaway.

A team of horses driven by Mr. John Hambly, sr., of North Fredericksburgh, ran away on Dundas street on Saturday forenoon. They were stopped in their wild career by running up against the fence surrounding Mr. Maybee's residence. The articles in the rig were strewn all along the road, and the wheels and general ensemble of the wagon were badly smashed and disfigured. Fortunately the horses were not badly injured.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society was held in the council chamber on Wednesday evening. All the old officers were re-elected by acclamation. Mr. John Pollard read a paper on "Fertilization by Pollen." At the close a vote of thanks was tendered all the officers for past services, and Mr. Pollard for his paper, with a request that it be published in both the local papers. It will consequently appear next week.

Eyes, Who's Eyes?

Your eyes, if they pain, ache or have a tired feeling, they are only giving nature's call for assistance, but do not experiment with them yourself. Go directly to Smith's optician, who will test your eyes free of charge and advise you regarding them. Smith's have a tremendous stock of optical goods at every price. Their axis out perfected pebble spectacles are the best in the world. As the long evenings are coming on why not enjoy solid comfort with your eyes. Bring your children if they complain of their eyes, as theirs are most precious.

Foolish Prejudices.

How does it happen that so many ladies are so very careful about dresses and bonnets, and neglect the head-dress? It is because they are prejudice against artificial hair? Ladies of the most exalted positions in the land are wearing Prof. Dorenwend's manufactured goods. They are beautiful and attractive and give a charming appearance to the face. Throw aside your false notions of propriety, and examine the professor's elegant lines of Wigs, Switches, Braids and Wavy Fronts, etc. Read the advertisement in another column and remember that he will be at the Paisley House on Saturday January 11th.

Yarker's Young Giant.

The News had a call on Tuesday from Yarker's young giant, Allan Sylvor, who has just turned 26 years of age, weighs 225 lbs, stands six feet four in height, flat footed, and has a constitution like a race horse. Mr. Sylvor thinks nothing of shouldering a barrel of sugar and carrying it from the station down town and can cut a cord of wood once in two every hour for ten hours a day. The young man still continues to increase in strength and if nothing happens he will turn out to be one of the giants of Canada. He is single hearted but has a strong love for the fair sex and will no doubt make a big catch for some bonnie lassie. —Tweed News.

To Our Many Customers.

We thank you most heartily and sincerely for the vast amount of patronage we have received during the past year, and we trust by strict and careful attention to business, to merit a continuance of the same. Our motto, "A pleased customer will call again." Parker's Dye Works, Toronto, are known to be the largest and most extensive Cleaners and Dyers of ladies and gentle wearing apparel, in Canada, and they will be pleased to receive any of your goods for cleaning or dyeing, which they will give their very best attention. Orders may be left with our agent at this office, Express Book Store, Napanee.

Acted Like a Gentleman.

Dear EXPRESS—As I have just returned from the wild and woody West, I would ask you to spare me space in your valuable paper to contradict some mistatements disparaging to my worthy tenant, W. E. Wilson. I heard ere I reached home that he (W. E. Wilson) was smuggling away my cows. Such is not the case, as Mr. Wilson has acted like a gentleman, paid his rent each year and worked my farm in a husbandlike manner, and repaired fences and buildings according to agreement in lease. I hope you may give this publicity in justice to Mr. Wilson. Yours,

JOHN WALKER.

We are in receipt of Smith's Planetary Almanac and weather guide for 1896. The late Mr. Smith's place is taken by J. H. Orley, an intimate friend of the dead astronomer and meteorologist, and the almanac is just as full and, we believe, as reliable as ever.

At the annual festivity of the S.S., Winchester Springs, a flattering address was read from the B. class to the Pastor, Rev. D. MacEachern, presenting a handsome study chair and several other tokens of value, mentioned "as slight tokens of warm esteem and marked appreciation." Mr. MacEachern has already ingratiated himself into the affections of the people, which is clearly shown by the crowded houses and growing interest in church work.

Smith's Planetary Almanac gives the following forecast of the weather during the present month: "A stormy month. Some wild, stormy days, and severe, cold 'dips,' with a mild, rainy, sleety period. Opening with fair weather, there will be a stormy spell in each week of the month, moderating to clear, cold, bracing weather. The feature of this month will be its blustery, unsettled state, with mean temperature above the average." Paste the above in your hat and verify the truth or fallacy of the prophecy.

Has Issued a Writ.

Herrington & Warner have issued a writ against the Wrought Iron Range Co'y. of Toronto, whose agents are doing business throughout this section. As considerable interest is being evinced in the case, an EXPRESS representative waited upon Herrington & Warner on Monday, and Mr. Herrington furnished us with the following particulars:

Mr. Henry Creighton, of South Fredricksburgh, purchased a range from the Wrought Iron Stove Company, of Toronto, in December, and gave a promissory note for $60, payable in July, 1896, in payment. He was given a warranty in reference to the stove. The stove didn't work to his satisfaction. His wife couldn't bake in it, and she professes to be a good baker, having been awarded first prize on several occasions at the fair here. Mr. Creighton saw the head agent and complained that the stove wouldn't work. Two or three visits were made by the agent, but none of these resulted in making the stove work to the satisfaction of either Mr. Creighton or his wife. Mr. Creighton demanded his note. It was not returned and this action is the result. A writ has been issued and served, and stripped of its formal parts these are the words:

The plaintiff's claim is for $100 damages for that the defendants did through their servants and agents on or about the 10th day of December, A.D. 1895, fraudulently obtain from the plaintiff his promissory note for $60 payable to the order of the defendants, and for that the defendants did on or about the aforesaid date, through fraud and misrepresentation, sell to the plaintiff an alleged wrought iron range warranted by the defendants to bake and boil and do all kinds of cooking in a good workmanlike manner, whereas said range was not of wrought iron and would not in any particular fulfil said warranty, and for the labor, trouble, and expense incurred by the plaintiff in and about said defective range; and that said promissory note be delivered up to be cancelled.

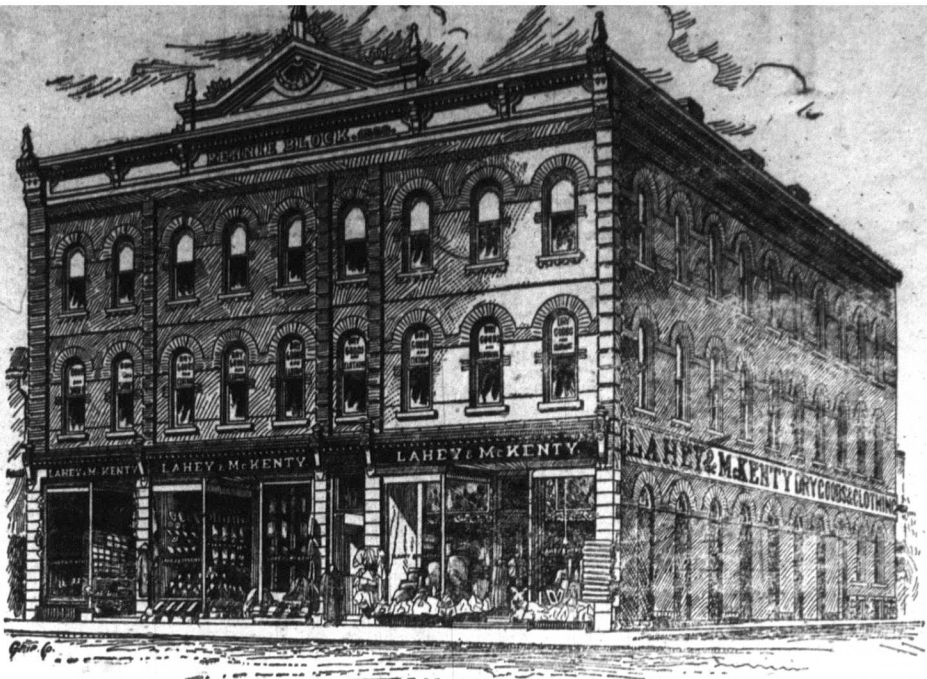

We saw the agent of the Wrought Iron Range Company in reference to the matter, and he says he would have gladly taken back the stove if he could have conscientiously done so in justice to the company, as he has no doubt injured his business. He believes the range to be all right and a good cooker, and says he is willing to leave it to any disinterested baker to judge. THE EXPRESS desires to be perfectly fair in the matter, and will refrain from commenting on the case till after the trial, the outcome of which is being watched with interest.

Run Over By a Train.

Mr. John Carlton was run over by a G.T.R. train at Collins Bay on Tuesday. The old man had been in the Kingston Hospital up to a few days before the accident, and had been showing signs of mental weakness. He left Kingston on Tuesday to secure some clothes he had left in a house at Collins Bay at which he had boarded. He purposed riding back to Kingston, but missed the train and started to walk along the railway track to the city. When some distance from Collins Bay he was met by a train from Kingston and he stepped on to the parallel line of track, only to be struck by a second train coming in the opposite direction. He was picked up and taken to Napanee on the out bound train, but as there was no accommodation for him there, he was sent to Kingston. When he reached the hospital his right hand was frozen, besides the injuries sustained by the accident. His face was cut badly and his right ankle terribly smashed. It was found necessary to amputate the leg between the knee and ankle Wednesday morning. He died on Thursday morning.

A Wilton Case Decided.

Sills vs Warner—Judgment in action for the construction of the will of Henry Pultz and the administration of his estate, tried without a jury at Napanee. Judgment declaring the devise and bequests contained in paragraphs thirteen, fourteen and fifteen of the will void except as to the pure personality of the testator, declaring the devise contained in paragraph sixteen valid, and that contained in paragraph fifteen void; consolidating this action with the administrative action of Sills vs Warner, and referring to the local master at Napanee to prepare and report a scheme for the charity mentioned in paragraphs thirteen, fourteen and fifteen of the will; directing that the costs of all parties (those of the executors and trustees between solicitor and client) be paid out of the estate and be primarily chargeable on the residue and paid by the executor, after taxation out of any moneys in his hands applicable for that purpose. If necessary or desired, further directions and costs will be reserved, and if necessary the judgment may provide for the administration of the estates to the testator and his widow, with a reference to the same master to take all necessary accounts.

RICHMOND ROADS.

To the Editor of THE EXPRESS.

Mr. Editor, in your issue of last week, reference is made by your Selby correspondent to some remarks made by one of the nominees on the day of nomination in regard to road expenditure. The lateness of the season in which the expenditure was made appears to have been the ground of objection. The objection was, I consider, well taken. As every person who has travelled the roads on which the expenditure was made, must know. The expenditure was not made until some time during the late autumn when the heavy rains of that season prevented the consolidation of the material (it being sand) thereby causing a much worse condition of roads, greater inconvenience to travel, and immense loss of the money expended. If the council's road engineer had made a visit of inspection to some portions of his autumn road improvements during, or immediately after one of the heavy rains and witnessed the lively efforts of his sandy road material to transfer itself from the highway into the ditches, he might have drawn some conclusions worthy of a place in his next official report. The effort to improve heavily travelled road ways with ever so liberal an application of "sand and rain water" (as your correspondent very aptly termed it) must forever stand unique in the history of road making. But there is hope blooming up for Richmond highways. It is said that the council have made the discovery (whether through the report of their road engineer or personal observation is not known) that the ditches, instead of the roads have largely become the recipients of the road grant for the year 1895, and on the day of nomination through their worthy Reeve, acknowledged that their road expenditure had been too long delayed. And since that day they have been individually assuring the electors that, if returned there shall be no cause for complaint on road account another year. Your correspondent has not learned the results of yesterday's voting, but is of the opinion that the electors have accepted the promise of amendment made by the old council and returned them for another year. Since writing the above I have learned Mr. Alex. Hewitt, the hero of Willow Marsh has been elected a new man.

of keeping in repair such a long stretch of board walk as Napanee possesses is considerable, and the annual appropriation to the Street committee, when the other branches under its supervision has been attended to, goes but a small way to keep the walks in repair. The consequence is that the town is always the unhappy possessor of a lot of bad walks with all their attendant inconveniences.

Last summer Dr. Ward introduced a by-law at the town council which never got further than the first reading. It provided among other things, that the expenditure on walks be kept in a separate account, and that a special tax be imposed for the maintenance of the sidewalks. It accorded any ratepayer the privilege of building a walk in front of his own premises, under the supervision of the Street committee, and so long as he kept it in proper repair he was to be exempt from the sidewalk tax. This was the only scheme suggested during the past year looking towards the providing of better walks.

It is a wonder that the idea of putting down gravel walks wherever practicable has not suggested itself to the town council. Nice firm gravel walks, when properly put down, are as clean and solid as granolithic. The first cost of building them, providing the gravel can be secured handy is not so large as board walks, and it costs little or nothing to keep them in repair. They would be more in the nature of permanent walks, than anything we could build outside of granolithic.

The municipal elections in town on Monday were hotly contested, but it was characterized by the absence of that hard feeling which contests of this kind too often engender. The unsuccessful candidates accepted their defeat quite philosophically, and if the P.P.A.society did take the active part in the contest, which rumor credits it with, it was pretty forcibly reminded that the electors of Napanee do not desire the introduction of lodge politics in municipal affairs.

The personnel of the new council leads us to believe that we have men at the helm who will discharge the important duties devolving upon them in a businesslike and economical manner. Although the complexion of last year's council was pronouncedly Reform there was a complete absence of partisanship, nor was there any attempt made to manage affairs on political lines. We believe at the end of the year we shall be able to say as much for the council of 1896.

The lodge of the Independent Order of Foresters at Selby has entered a protest against Oronhyatekha's attempt to wheel the Foresters into line to support McGillivray at the recent bye-election in North Ontario. They resent this introduction of politics into the Order, and call upon McGillivray to give up his seat in the House or to resign his position as secretary of the Order. If secret fraternal societies start dabbling in politics their usefulness will soon be gone.

The commutation of the death sentence imposed upon Valentine Shorttis to imprisonment for life is being harshly commented on, and down in Valleyfield where he committed his fiendish murders the people are terribly incensed and indignant. It is not from any feeling of bloodthirstiness or spirit of revenge that the people are seeking his death, but they resent the intervention of the Governor-General which robs the gallows of its just reward, on purely sympathetic grounds. Shorttis received a fair trial, and deserved to hang, if ever a man deserved to be hanged. There is no doubt that had Shorttis been poor and without influence he would have ere this paid the penalty of his crimes. This is what is troubling the people. Under Britain's boasted impartial system there should not be one law for the rich and another for the poor. Shorttis may yet expiate his crimes on the gallows. He was only condemned to death for the murder of one of his victims. He may yet be tried for the murder of one of the others.

We understand that there is a movement on foot to disqualify some of the members of the new council.

On Monday evening some of the band boys decided to serenade the successful candidates for the town council. They intended to give them a regular surprise and quietly repaired to the town hall, but to their disappointment the building that but such a short while before rung with the impassioned words of the defeated and successful aspirants, was empty and silence reigned supreme. Nothing daunted the musicians decided to serenade the councilors at their homes. They accordingly lined up in front of a mansion on East st. They arranged their music and attempted to toot but judge of their dismay when the instruments refused to respond. Jack Frost had got in his work—their horns were frozen. The disappointed players stole quietly back to the band hall, and faithfully determined to keep their non successful surprise party a secret.
